Mark Hamill, the modest Jedi

He's not "just" Luke Skywalker — he's one of the greatest movie heroes of all time. GABRIEL HUERTA / MWV

As the world prepares for the year's most anticipated movie release, Metro had the opportunity to speak with Mark Hamill and learn about his return to the franchise, his place within the cast, his opinions on spoilers and more.

He first hit the big screen as Skywalker a whopping 40 years ago, and has donned a light saber in subsequent sequels over the decades that followed. So what should we expect from Hamill in "The Last Jedi"?

According to him, he doesn't consider himself the protagonist of the film. Rather, his role "is more akin to what Sir Alec Guinness did in our films," Hamill says, and thus he'll become more of an ensemble actor than all-encompassing sun in the center of the Star Wars universe. This despite director Rian Johnson mentioning that Luke Skywalker's role "is going to be the centerpiece of this movie."

So ... how much Hamill? "At least twice as much as in Episode VII," he says.

For him, returning to the saga was somewhat surreal.

"I never expected to come back," Hamill tells us. "We had a beginning, a middle and an end, and in like any fairy tale, they lived happily ever after. All conflicts were resolved. We were under the impression that Episodes VII, VIII and IX would be so far in the future that we wouldn't be involved. When we found out that they wanted us back, it was a combination of exhilaration and sheer terror."

Part of this terror was disappointing the franchise's deeply loyal fan base. Internally, Hamill had conditioned his return to what his old pal Harrison Ford decided, since for him "it was like reforming the group — if the drummer doesn't come back, the bass player doesn't come back, the lead singer ... It's not a true reunion."

And to his surprise, Ford jumped on the bandwagon (sorry, we had to). And just like that, the gang was all there.

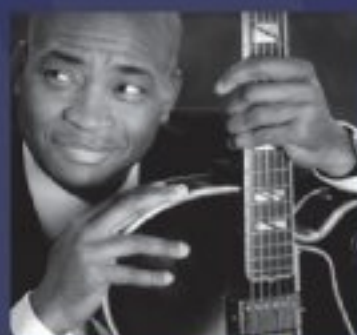

"Everyone is coming back, the fans will hate me if I say no, and I'm sure I wouldn't say no, but Harrison was the catalyst," Hamill recalls.

Despite being one of the actors of the original trilogy, Hamill didn't feel the need to teach his newer cast mates a thing, and considers

WINNER OF PENN AND TELLER FOOL US

Illusionist Ivan Amodei

Illusionist Ivan Amodei, the current WINNER of the CW's Penn & Teller's FOOL US is on a national tour with his show Intimate Illusions. Ivan recently appeared on the CW's "Penn & Teller's Fool Us" season finale and fooled the pants off veteran Las Vegas magicians Penn & Teller and was declared the winner.

Currently on a eight year run at his residency at the famous Beverly Wilshire Hotel in Beverly Hills, Ivan arrives in Boston on Dec 26th and 27th. Returning to the historic and newly renovated Boston Park Plaza for his third time, he will bring a new set of incredible illusions unlike any you have ever seen before. The 90-minute show will included the baffling illusion that FOOLED Penn & Teller, as well as, other stunning coincidences, psychological illusions and spectacular brain games. All wrapped around spellbinding story-telling and masterful showmanship.

Set in elegant, candlelit ballroom and filled with audience participation, you'll witness Amodei manipulate time, alter someone's fate and even discover a spectator's destiny — might it be you? And don't forget the musical score by Celine Dion's main star cellist Irina Chirkova that accompanies the show.

For tickets, call 866-811-4111 or visit www.ivanamodei.com.

"It's about time to re-meet Mark's Skywalker." LUCASFILM each one "accomplished on their own." And with names like Oscar Isaac, Domhnall Gleeson, Andy Serkis, Gwendoline Christie, Benicio del Toro and Laura Dern on the roster, humbly admits "they don't need advice from me! If anything, I should be the one asking for advice."

With so many big names, and with a franchise of this size, how was it possible to keep things as secretive as they have for the

Dec. 15 premiere of "The Last Jedi," especially considering the whole "I am your father" level of plot twists audiences can expect?

"It's so hard!" he reveals.

"The line written in the script (of "The Empire Strikes Back") was 'You don't know the truth — Obi-Wan killed your father!' It was a burden to keep the secret, but there were so many extras playing Stormtroopers ... and within three days of filming that scene, the cover of one tabloid was: 'Guinness head baddie in Star Wars 2.' I was so thrilled that they leaked fake information!"

Three days seems like forever in the modern 24-hour TMZ cycle, so Hamill took to Twitter and wrote "People, please, keep the secrets of [Episode] VIII to yourself."

In the words of Yoda, "Do. Or do not. There is no try."

Thankfully, the wait is over, and we can learn the secrets for ourselves on screen.

Metro spoke to Neal Scanlan, Lucasfilm's "Creature Creator," about the development of the adorable doe-eyed critters.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
@MetroBOS
gregory.wakeman@metro.us

The ever-increasing size of the hugely passionate Porg Nation is the only proof you need of just how popular the tiny creatures known as Porgs already are.

Which is particularly incredible because "Star Wars: The Last Jedi" isn't even out yet, so we've only briefly been able to meet them through film trailers. So for a bit more context, we sat down with Neal Scanlan, the genius behind so many beloved "Star Wars" extraterrestrials, and he broke down exactly how they came to be.

It turns out that we have director Rian Johnson to thank for the animals, as he was the first to insist that they'd populate the planet of Ahch-To, the home to the lonesome Luke Skywalker at the end of "The Force Awakens."

"The amazing thing about Rian as a director is that the first time we met he had the entire movie in his head," said Scanlan. "We could sit down and ask, 'What about this sequence?' And he'd be able to describe it very clearly."

"So he said to us, 'The place where Luke is, there happens to be these little characters called Porgs.' So we were like, 'Oh my gosh! They have a name already.' When you close your eyes and say the name, it suggests something. 'Porg' is a great name."

Johnson went on to describe them to Scanlan as "sort of a cross between a puffin, a seal and a pug dog. With that information, we effectively just sketched away and played for several weeks."

The breakthrough came courtesy of a vegetable, though. "One day one of the guys came up with this drawing that looked like an oval potato, with little legs and big eyes," and the Porg was born.

Simplicity like this is

Porgs are apparently part potato, part precious. ALL PHOTOS: LUCASFILM key to creature design.

"It was in the tradition of being a 'Star Wars' character," he shared. "You think of BB-8 [the R2-D2-adjacent character introduced in 'The Force Awakens' two years ago], there's a clear silhouette to BB-8. Any child can draw it."

And audiences will get their formal introduction to the feathery potatoes when "The Last Jedi" drops in theaters on Dec. 15.

In his last film, "Pacific Rim," Guillermo del Toro pitted giant robots against aquatic monsters, but in his latest, "The Shape of Water," someone falls in love with one. If you're burnt out with OK Cupid, Tinder, or whatever's the app du jour, you might try coming to this singles event, which employs ice-breaking techniques, some drawn from tantra yoga, to help cut through all those pesky psychological defenses and tedious small talk. Perhaps you'll make a match. If not, at least you'll have something to post about. Dec. 16, 5 p.m., Arts at the Armory, 191 Highland Ave., Somerville, $35-$60, artsatthe-armory.org

PODCASTS

"Up and Vanished" Live

Come to a live recording of "Up and Vanished," a mystery podcast revolving around the disappearance of a young woman, Tara Grinstead, in Georgia in 2005. The case file is the largest in Georgia history, but it remains unsolved—unless host and amateur sleuth Payne Lindsay cracks the case! Fans of "Serial" should check this out if they aren't already fans.

Gifts for commuters

If your giftee is always on the go, we've found the best picks for their day packs. Plane, train and automobile journeys are never fun (especially first thing on a Monday morning), so spoil the straphanger in your life with one of these Metro faves. JOSHUA CROUTHAMEL

..... Bag it

The North Face Resistor Charged Backpack doesn't just hold everything you'll need for the day, but it also packs a punch of juice for your hand-held devices (3.5x a full cellphone battery). It features a removable, water-resistant battery pack; a padded, fleece-lined tablet pocket; a phone cozy; a 13" laptop compartment and still has room for last night's leftovers or gym shoes for lunch hour.

From $138.95 on Zappos.com

..... Hear it

Earbuds are out — now that we're in scarf season (and living in 2017) there's no need to hassle with cords. There are plenty of wireless headphones on the market at varying price points, but if you're going to opt for the best, look no further than Bose. Their QuietComfort 35 Wireless Headphones make the most of today's Bluetooth technology and aren't just noise-cancelling and able to handle your calls, texts and tunes — they have Google Assistant built in. "Google, is my train running late AGAIN?" Actually, you don't need these to know the answer is always "yes."

$299.95 on Bose.com

Eat it

Sure, lunch boxes were way more fun when they had cartoon characters on the outside (not to mention on the Thermos). But if it's time to find a practical present, the Rubbermaid LunchBlox Sandwich Kit's both affordable and awesome. It includes modular containers that snap together, including a blue ice freezer pack that can keep chosen compartments chilly. They're microwave, dishwasher and freezer safe, and don't have any of those nasty BPAs. $5.85 on Amazon

..... Learn it

Podcasts and music are a great way to unplug while you're plugged in, but why not take the opportunity to catch up on some hands-free reading? Audio books are a great way to make it through a page-turner without ever having to remove your gloves. And with titles that appeal to TV nuts (like "Big Little Lies" and "The Handmaid's Tale"), political junkies (of all stars and stripes, from Obama's books to "Let Trump Be Trump") and kids (or kids at heart, with all 93 or so of the Harry Potter tomes), there's something for everyone.

$45 for a three-month gift subscription to Audible.com

..... Juice it

Not ready to pony up for a bag with charging capabilities? Grab this pocket-size external battery and flashlight for a fraction of the cost, and say goodbye to flat phones (and anxiety-laden journeys with no Candy Crush). The Jackery Bar holds 6000mAh, whatever that means (about two full phone charges, if we're to be a bit more specific) and looks great. $17.99 on Amazon.com

Bitter cold and strong winds moving through Massachusetts

Get ready for single-digit temps and strong gusts. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Time to bundle up, Boston: Wind and bitter cold temps are moving through the area.

"The main weather story for today will be wind and cold," forecasters for the National Weather Service wrote.

Gusts could hit reach 40 to 50 mph across Massachusetts on Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service.

Those strong blows mean wind chills will drop into the single digits and teens, and the service has issued a wind advisory for most of Massachusetts. In Boston, expect 39 mph winds and an 8-degree minimum wind chill.

Even though the sun will be out, it won't add any warmth, according to AccuWeather. "Wednesday will be the coldest, and definitely the coldest-feeling day of the season so far across most of the Northeast," AccuWeather Meteorologist Brian Thompson said.

Better bundle up for the cold temps. GETTY IMAGES

As temps stay low, the south coast and Islands may see some snow Thursday that could impact the morning commute. Forecasters are giving Boston a "slight chance of snow" Thursday.

Though the wind is expected to ease up on Thursday, the afternoon could still see gusts of 20 to 30 mph and "another unseasonably cold day with highs [in the] mid 20s to lower 30s," the National Weather Service reported.

These arctic temperatures will be sticking around for a while. High temps on Friday will remain "below freezing for most areas," the weather service said, though the south coast, Cape Cod and the Islands may see an increase, moving up to the lower to mid 30s.

On Saturday, expect highs in the mid 20s to lower 30s again, and a cold night with temperatures in the teens. On Sunday, Massachusetts could see some snow showers in the afternoon, though it may mix with rain, forecasters warn, before changing back to snow showers Sunday night.

Finally, there will be some relief from the bitter cold by Monday, when this cold front pushes offshore and forecasted temperatures will be "close to seasonal levels," reaching a high around 42 degrees.

When it's colder than 40 degrees, Boston officials warn resident not to leave infants or children outdoors for long periods of time, and to check on elderly family and neighbors.

Harvard is penalizing single-gender social clubs, but sororities plan to recruit anyway

Three Harvard sororities say they will be recruiting freshmen next year, even though the university is cracking down on such social organizations. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Harvard has long debated cracking down on its single-gender social clubs, and university officials recently announced that by the start of next semester, the college will finalize a plan to penalize members of such organizations.

Though the school has stepped back from its suggestion to completely ban fraternities, sororities and other social clubs, the news about upcoming penalties has still upset some groups.

Despite the threat of penalties, three sororities at Harvard said in a statement on Tuesday that they will still host their recruitment processes for all freshman women next semester.

"This is the spirit in which Alpha Phi, Delta Gamma, and Kappa Alpha Theta were established during the early 1870s," the sororities said in their joint statement, titled "We Believe Women Should Make Their Own Choices."

There already are penalties for being involved in these single-gender clubs. Harvard announced in May 2016 that members of such clubs would be barred from leadership positions and certain fellowships at the school. That went into effect with freshman this year.

The three sororities acknowledged that their statement to include freshman women as members and in the recruitment process next semester violates the current sanctions in place, but they argue that female-focused spaces are important to the development of women on campus.

"These sanctions have been touted as a response to the recommendations of a report on sexual assault prevention," the statement reads. "Yet penalizing our future members for their involvement in a sorority in reality denies them access to member-driven education and support systems shown to be effective in battling sexual assault, as well as alcohol abuse, mental health issues, and the particular challenges inherent in college life."

"Further," it continues, "while Harvard's sanctions claim to support women's right to make their own decisions, these sanctions actually force women to choose between the opportunity to have supportive, empowering women-only spaces and external leadership opportunities."

Dean of Harvard College Rakesh Khurana told the Harvard Crimson last week that the single-gender club penalties will be announced at the start of the spring semester, which the Crimson notes is also when sorority recruitment begins. Only one Harvard sorority, Kappa Kappa Gamma, was not part of the statement, the Crimson pointed out.

"While Harvard's sanctions claim to support women's right to make their own decisions, these sanctions actually force women to choose between the opportunity to have supportive, empowering women-only spaces and external leadership opportunities."

Alpha Phi, Delta Gamma and Kappa Alpha Theta, in a statement.

Cannabis commission exploring ways to help communities hurt by pot ban

The Cannabis Control Commission is looking into how the new marijuana industry can benefit those affected by earlier laws against weed. STATE HOUSE NEWS SERVICE

As it works to build a new industry from the ground up, state marijuana regulators on Tuesday wrestled with how Massachusetts' newly legal marijuana industry could be more accessible to racially and economically diverse communities and how the industry could benefit groups that were disproportionately affected by the enforcement of marijuana prohibition.

The Cannabis Control Commission adopted the frameworks for a priority review process for license applicants that demonstrate they have or will promote economic empowerment in disproportionately harmed communities and for a program that would provide business assistance to help people from such communities establish themselves in the industry.

The programs discussed Tuesday are intended to help spread the benefits of the regulated marijuana industry to people of varying socio-economic statuses and to help give a leg up for people who were convicted for their involvement in the formerly illicit marijuana market.

A license applicant would be eligible for priority review if they meet two of the following criteria: that a majority of the entity's ownership belongs to people who have lived in areas of disproportionate impact for five of last 10 years, that a majority of ownership has economic empowerment experience, at least 51 percent of current employees or sub-contractors reside in areas of disproportionate impact and that number will increase to 75 percent by the beginning of business, that at least 51 percent of employees have a prior drug-related conviction or that owners can demonstrate significant, articulable past experience of economic empowerment.

"If an applicant can show they meet the criteria the commission puts in place, the applicant will move ahead in line so hopefully they can open their doors sooner," Commissioner Shaleen Title, who previously ran an industry recruiting firm focused on diversity and inclusion in hiring, said of the priority review proposal. "This is not a license designation ... this is about speed through the process."

State law requires the CCC to adopt in regulation "procedures and policies to promote and encourage full participation in the regulated marijuana industry by people from communities that have previously been disproportionately harmed by marijuana prohibition and enforcement and to positively impact those communities."

The commission approved an equity program Tuesday that would provide applicants and licensees with fee waivers and technical assistance with business management, recruitment and employee training, accounting and sales forecasting, tax prediction and compliance, business plan creation and operational development, and marijuana industry best practices.

An applicant or licensee would be eligible for the equity program if a majority of owners have resided in areas of disproportionate impact for five of the last 10 years, or have a prior conviction for a drug offense, or have a parent or spouse who has a prior conviction for a drug offense.

The CCC agreed to dedicate its Jan. 9 meeting to having a detailed discussion of how it will define "communities that have previously been disproportionately harmed by marijuana prohibition and enforcement" using arrest data and economic factors.

Massachusetts voters approved a legal recreational marijuana bill in November 2016. GETTY IMAGES

A wild ride back in time

Portugal's Peneda-Geres National Park is an underexplored destination unique in every way.

Fodor's Travel

Most visitors to Portugal make a beeline for the beaches or head straight to the hippest cities of Lisbon and Porto. But while this pocket-sized country on the Iberian peninsula seems to be on every traveler's European must-go list right now, one of its most astonishing attractions remains refreshingly under-the-radar.

Forget the golden sands and blue skies of the Algarve, the Alentejo, or the Lisbon Coast — at Parque Nacional Peneda-Gerês, the terrain is rocky, rugged and mountainous. The biodiversity is incredible, with close to 250 types of vertebrate joining endemic species such as the gold-striped salamander and endangered Iberian wolf in making this deeply forested region their home.

The park is rich in historical and cultural heritage, from megalithic necropolis and traces of Romanization, to castles, granaries, ovens, mills, dams and mountain villages, much of it well-preserved.

Peneda-Geres features plenty of man-made and natural attractions. GETTY IMAGES

Adventurous travelers will find endless opportunity for high-adrenaline pursuits such as canyoning and caving, while hikers and runners can take trails that cut through crashing waterfalls and cooling natural pools, and wildlife lovers can marvel at the rugged grey mountains rising from green, green landscapes sprinkled with colorful wildflowers such as the Gerês lily, a blue-violet flower endemic to the park.

Golden eagles soar through skies that may be a scorchingly clear blue in summer, or a seething mass of grey clouds from October through May (all that exuberant vegetation is the result of regular thunderous downpours).

While visitors are unlikely to have any up-close-and-personal encounters with the wolves that roam the park, they are almost certain to encounter long-horned cattle wandering through the street, and catch a glimpse of garrano ponies—small wild horses that have free run of the land.

Ancient churches and other religious buildings dot the landscape, while the dramatic medieval bridge over the sparkling river Rabagão is said to have been built by the Devil himself (it's commonly known as Ponto de Diabo) to help a bandit escape his pursuers.

Accommodation options at the park range from several well-equipped campsites, a youth hostel, and village inn to a relatively plush spa hotel on the edge of the park at Vieira do Minho. Many tour operators run trips here, and it can be visited as a side trip from Porto or Braga.

Discover the curious and cool at the Vermont Ski and Snowboard Museum.

ERIC WILBUR

Every artifact might have its own story, but that doesn't mean a collection always carries a common theme.

Such was the contemplative background of the Vermont Ski and Snowboard Museum's new exhibit, "Curious and Cool," an eclectic mix of unusual and random items from the worlds of skiing and snowboarding, now on display in downtown Stowe.

"It has lots of the really fun, eclectic mishmash of stuff that people have collected and donated to the museum," says exhibit curator Meredith Scott. "It's kind of a celebration of all these people and their stories and the places throughout Vermont that these funny things represent."

ally old to really new," Scott says.

Among Scott's favorite pieces in the exhibit is a crafted mobile featuring two people riding a lift with little pieces of wood for their skis. Each pole has a piece of sequin as the pole basket and distinctively-patterned clothing, an oddity for sure, that didn't exactly fit the mold of the museum's previous exhibits.

While the evolution of skiing in general is on display, it's the recognition of the people behind the items that Scott hopes to highlight.

"When you're telling a distinct story, there are so many great things that should come out," she says. "The people are just so important."

museum have centered around ski fashion, or detailing the history of the National Ski Patrol. But with a number of imminent anniversaries to look forward to (it's been 30 years since the museum first opened in Brandon, Vt., and 15 years since it arrived in Stowe at the Perkins Building, which celebrates its own 200th anniversary in 2018), Scott believes it just seemed like time to "get out all the fun stuff that never really fit into those nice, neat, themed stories."

Two years went into the planning of the exhibit, which opened Dec. 1 and runs through October. While some of the items have been exhibited in the past (including one of the two gold medals Vermont skier Andrea Mead Lawrence won at the 1952 Olympics) much of it has been in storage over the years, giving Scott the opportunity to revisit the wealth of items she has collected over time and put away since becoming the museum's first full-time curator in 2002.

There's one of the original chairs from Stowe's Ranch Camp, an old lumber camp that served as the beginning of the town's skiing reputation. There are samples of chairlift rope unraveled to reveal what it's made of. Burton's 2018 Olympic uniform is even on display, the only place to see the collection on exhibit.

3 Things to watch for as Pats face Steelers

We own Pitt

The narrative surrounding the Steelers defense in recent years was that their secondary and overall pass defense was brutal. Statistics bear out that that's no longer the case as the Steelers have the fourth best pass defense in the NFL this year (averaging 200.8 pass yards per game).

Meanwhile, Tom Brady has been good but just not his usual-MVP self lately. Brady has averaged just 239.3 passing yards per game in the past three weeks and hasn't gone for over 300 yards since the blowout win over Oakland on Nov. 19.

That said, Brady usually saves his best performances for Mike Tomlin and crew. In a 27-16 regular season win at the Steelers in October 2016, Brady was scary efficient—completing 19-of-26 passes for 222 yards, two touchdowns and zero picks. He finished the game with a sensational 124.2 passer rating.

In the AFC title game in Foxboro this past January, Brady outdid himself as he completed 32-of-42 for 384 yards, three touchdowns and zero picks. He finished that one with a 127.5 passer rating.

The Gronk factor

Rob Gronkowski will return Sunday for the Patriots after serving a one-game suspension for his dirty play against the Bills on Dec. 3.

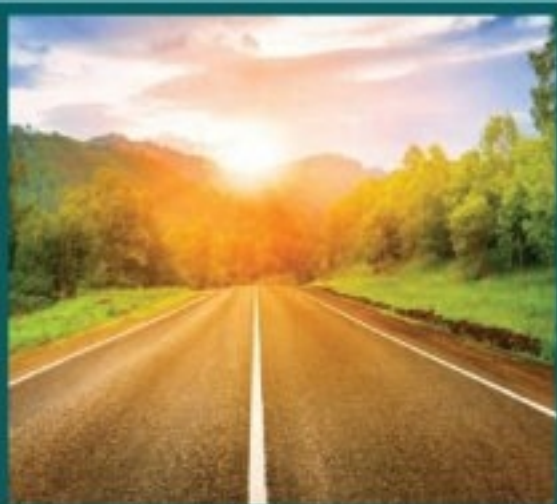

Gronkowski had finally been getting back to "Gronk status" prior to the suspension as he caught five balls for 82 yards and two touchdowns against the Dolphins on Nov. 26 and had nine catches for a season-high 147 yards against Buffalo.

Not only was Gronk absent in the loss in Miami but offensive tackle Marcus Cannon, running back Mike Gillislee, linebacker Kyle Van Noy and defensive end Trey Flowers were inactive. Expect the Pats to have all hands on deck in this ultra-important game on Sunday at Heinz Field.

WEEK 15
Sunday at 4:25 p.m. on CBS

Silencing Bell

A big reason why the Patriots destroyed the Steelers in the AFC Championship Game last January is because they did not have to deal much with Pittsburgh running back Le'Veon "the king of hesitation" Bell.

Bell left the AFC title game in Foxboro with a groin injury after carrying the ball just six times for

This season, the Steelers look to be playing possum with Bell. Unlike in years past, the Steelers are limiting Bell's carries, except in games they absolutely need to have. Coming off a loss to Chicago in Week 3, the Steelers gave Bell the ball a season-high 35 times at Baltimore the next week Bell responded with a 144-yard rushing performance with two touchdowns. Coming off a loss to Jacksonville in early October, the Steelers gave Bell the ball 32 times against Kansas City and Bell responded with a 179-yard rushing performance. Bell has not carried the ball more than 26 times in a game in nearly two months. Perhaps Pittsburgh has been saving him up for this Sunday. MATT BURKE

TERMS OF SALE: A deposit of FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS AND 00 CENTS ($5,000.00) in the form of a certified check, bank treasurer's check or money order will be required to be delivered at or before the time the bid is offered. The successful bidder will be required to execute a Foreclosure Sale Agreement immediately after the close of the bidding. The balance of the purchase price shall be paid within thirty (30) days from the sale date in the form of a certified check, bank treasurer's check or other check satisfactory to Mortgagee's attorney. The Mortgagee reserves the right to bid at the sale, to reject any and all bids, to continue the sale and to amend the terms of the sale by written or oral announcement made before or during the foreclosure sale. If the sale is set aside for any reason, the Purchaser at the sale shall be entitled only to a return of the deposit paid. The purchaser shall have no further recourse against the Mortgagor, the Mortgagee or the Mortgagee's attorney. The description of the premises contained in said mortgage shall control in the event of an error in this publication. TIME WILL BE OF THE ESSENCE.

Other terms if any, to be announced at the sale.

Aries Discipline and hard work will pay off. Use your intelligence and experience to ward off a tempting offer from someone who has been a bad influence in the past.

Taurus If you share your emotions with someone you are close to, together you will come up with a unique plan that will help you avoid setbacks or additional debt.

Gemini Make travel plans or set up a business meeting that will help you decide how to move forward. Use your imagination and offer innovative ideas to seal a deal.

Cancer Plan a day trip or shopping spree or make plans to spend time with a loved one. A partnership can be taken to a new level if you discuss your intentions.

Leo Situations at home will be difficult to deal with if you have overspent or been indulgent in any way. You can have fun without going overboard. Put others first.

Virgo You'll learn through observation and mingling with people who are heading in the same direction as you. Networking functions will encourage you to develop new skills.

Libra Don't let someone from your past lead you astray or tempt you to get involved in something unsavory or imprudent. Use your intelligence and make wise choices.

Scorpio Emotional matters should be addressed in a unique manner. Catching someone's attention will help you flesh out some of the details necessary for successful plans.

Sagittarius Dig in and get things done. Your ability to turn something small into something big and meaningful will be impressive. Personal changes are encouraged.

Capricorn Check out your professional options. Using your skills in a different forum will lead to new possibilities. Personal changes can also be put into play.

Aquarius It will be difficult to contain your emotions. Don't let anger set in and take control. Opt to do your own thing, calm down and help those less fortunate.

Pisces Negotiate on your own behalf. Don't leave anything to chance or at the mercy of someone else's judgment. Get personal finances and documents in order. EUGENIA LAST
